

Websense® Master Database Competitive Category Comparisons

At the heart of Websense Enterprise® is the Websense Master Database. The database works in conjunction with Websense Enterprise software to effectively manage employee Internet use. Categories have been broken down to allow organizations to better adjust the level of access they want to give their users. In comparison, competitor databases lack the granularity of categorization offered by Websense. Having additional categories enables you to be more specific not only with the sites you block, but also with the sites you allow. The ability to manage with more sophistication or granularity in filtering options is important for corporations who want to maintain a balanced work/life environment for their employees. Database usage studies of our customers have found that the average number of categories filtered is 36.

* Category is broader than Websense category and may encompass two or more Websense categories

** Webwasher does not provide published definitions; category labels matched as best guesses

(1) Competitive categories are only sites that provide hacking tools or information on malicious code. Any type of site (e.g. sports, news) can be infected; therefore newly infected sites must be manually added to the database by the IT administrator. On the other hand, Websense has developed a system that scans 13 million sites each day for malicious mobile code. Sites identified as infected are then put in a specific MMC category then subsequently removed once they have been cleaned.

(2) Competitors do not really block spyware. They may have some spyware main sties (e.g. www.weatherbug.com) in their databases, but they cannot block communication of spyware applications to their host sites. Only Websense WebCatcher™ can identify these.
